| Rationale | In this unit, students move beyond simply recounting the past to understanding how to give meaning to the past. Students will appreciate how the events of the Holocaust (Shoah) occurred within the context of a three-fold narrative: the life of the Jewish people pre-Holocaust in Europe (pre-1933); the events of the Shoah and the process of giving identity to those who lived through this period (1933-1947); and the identities of survival and the meaning of returning to life post-Shoah (1947-present). Consideration of this narrative will occur within the context of reading a range of primary and secondary documentation related to Holocaust studies. Students will encounter this historical narrative through a variety of media as they consider philosophical and religious issues, the development of anti-Semitism, the Christian world and the Holocaust, personal testimony, political history, ghettos, acts of extermination, children’s literature, art and film, the shaping of Holocaust memory, liberation, the prosecution of war criminals and the phenomenon of Holocaust denial. Their cognitive, technical and communication skills will be developed by completing formal historical expository essays that will ask them to review and critically analyse, consolidate and synthesise historical knowledge.
Studies in this unit will allow students to broaden their understanding of the nature of the history of the Shoah. Consequently, they will be able to engage in broad and deep learning of the field of history. Students will understand, investigate and apply their disciplinary knowledge to the skills of history in order to communicate effectively within a range of academic and professional contexts. As the field of history is one which develops the skills of critical thinking and research, students will be able to collect and analyse relevant data in order to generate, test and communicate solutions to problems and challenges experienced in the academic engagement with this unit. |

Content

1. Enabling the Holocaust: Protagonists, perpetrators, victims and bystanders
2. Settings: Pre-war Germany, Nazi occupation, Ghettoization and camps
3. Representations of the Holocaust through different media
4. After the Holocaust: liberation, and the search for justice

Learning outcomes

On completion of this unit, students will have provided evidence that they have:

1. described the development of Holocaust history in a broad and coherent manner;
2. developed an understanding of the underlying principles and concepts inherent in the study of Holocaust history;
3. demonstrated the ability to analyse and evaluate historical documents in their context;
4. argued, using critical thinking and judgement, for or against an historical perspective, using appropriate resources and referencing;
5. justified, using autonomy and a well-developed judgement, the direction of research undertaken and resulting synthesis of historical conclusions;
6. devised appropriate historical arguments that are appropriate to a range of historical contexts; and
7. communicated at an appropriate tertiary standard: with special attention to design elements, grammars, usage, logical relations, style, referencing and presentation.
